

JOSHUA LURIE

SMALL BITES

John Fenyes and wife Andi have opened a Hungarian bakery and sandwich shop, Ap-Petite, in Pasadena. Their families were close in Budapest and tried to fix up various family members over the years, but John and Andi were the only pairing to connect. Everything at Ap-Petite is "petite," and all pastries are sold by the pound to encourage variety. Expect Fig Newton-like pastries called prune lekvar, borekas (rolls with sweetened farmer's cheese) and choceez (sweetened farmer's cheese rolled in milk chocolate, with lemon zest). The couple spreads open-faced sandwiches with körözött, left row above, a farmer's cheese mixed with paprika, onion, mustard and butter. 140 N. Lake Ave., Pasadena, (626) 744-0337
